To qualify as a third-party company or school, you are required to maintain a bond based on the number of drivers tested each calendar year.

Skills tests appointments must be submitted no later than 4 days prior to each test.

To qualify as a third-party company or school, your company or school needs to have a driver testing and training program that includes a skills test for each driver certified. You need to have adequate area and access to roads that will allow you to conduct the following in your training and testing:

When your company qualifies, you will be given a certification number. The annual fee for maintaining Third-Party Certification is $555.00. This fee will be collected when your application is approved.

Each employee or instructor must successfully complete a formal CDL test examiner training course and examination prior to being allowed to administer CDL skills tests.
