For correspondence; communication technology. NAC 483.778

1. A school may offer a correspondence course only if the school is approved for teaching the course in the classroom.
2. A school for training drivers may offer an interactive course that uses communications technology if the school is approved for teaching the course in the classroom and the communication technology system is approved by the Department.
3. A course given by correspondence or an interactive course that uses communication technology must have the same content as the course given in the classroom and if given by correspondence must entail at least 8 hours of study for its completion by an average student or if given by communications technology must consist of sequence of units of instruction, each of which entails at least as many hours of study for its completion by an average student as such a student would require to complete that unit in a classroom.
4. The school for training drivers must satisfy the Department that the communications technology accurately measures and records the amount of time spent by a student to complete a unit of instruction and that the student will be required to take the final examination for the course in person at the school or that the communications technology accurately measures and records the amount of time spent by a student to complete a unit of instruction, prevents the student from advancing to a subsequent unit of instruction if the student fails to complete the current unit or completes the current unit in less time than required, includes a system of validation criteria that establishes the identity of the student working on each unit of instruction, prevents a student who fails to satisfy 10 percent or more of the validation criteria from performing any additional work on that unit and receiving a certificate of completion for the course, and generates a report that include the full legal name of the student, the date and time that the student begins and ends each work session and the total actual time spent by a student to complete each unit.
5. The operator of a school must submit a report to the department whenever a student enrolls in a correspondence course or an interactive course that uses communications technology. The report must include the name of the student, his or her social security number, date of birth, place of residence and the name of the entity which referred him to the school.
6. Each student enrolled in a course taught by correspondence or an interactive course that uses communications technology must take a final examination and sign a notarized statement, under penalty of perjury, that he took the examination. If the student is under 18 years of age, a parent or legal guardian must sign the statement. The examination and the signed statement must be maintained in the school's file for the student and be made available for inspection by the department.
